HAD A REMARKABLE ESCAPE

Army Aviator Fell a Mile and Then Succeeded in Controlling His Machine.

The official "eyewitness" account of fighting near Ypres, Belgium, gives the following remarkable account of an army aviator's escape from death:

"One of our airmen had a thrilling experience. He was alone in a single-seated aeroplane in pursuit of a German machine. While trying to reload his machine gun he lost control of the steering gear and the aeroplane turned upside down. The belt around his waist happened to be loose, and the jerk of the turn almost threw him out of the machine, but he saved himself by clutching the rear center strut, the belt slipping down around his legs. While he hung, head downward, making desperate efforts to disengage his legs, the aeroplane fell from a height of 8,000 feet to about 3,000, spinning round and round like a falling leaf.

"At last he managed to free his legs and reach the control lever with his feet. He then succeeded in righting the machine, which turned slowly over, completely looping the loop, whereupon he slid back to his seat. This constitutes a record even in a service where hairbreadth escapes are of daily occurrence."

Vandalia Proved That She Was Immune From Dispossession That Had Been Threatened.

For the thirty-seventh time Mrs. Willis fired her cook.

"And mind, Vandalia," she warned her, "this is the last time I shall discharge you. I'm tired of giving you your walking papers and then discovering that you have failed to walk. If I find you here tomorrow morning, I warn you I shall resort to force!"

The next morning she was still messing up the kitchen. Mrs. Willis lost no time. That girl had to be fired. Summoning the town's entire force of firemen, she led them to the kitchen.

"Now, Vandalia," she said triumphantly, "will you leave peacefully or shall I be compelled to instruct these men to fire you?"

"Miss Willis," replied Vandalia firmly, "Ah simply can't be fired."

"And why not, pray?" inquired Mrs. Willis.

"Cause," chuckled Vandalia, "cause Ah'm a fireless cooker!"

And Mrs. Willis, who had her position as president of the Ladies' Comedy club to maintain, could do nothing but swallow her mortification and leave Vandalia in possession. — Louisville Times.

HIS ONLY COMMENT.

"So you told your boss about my two-hour public speech, did you?" said the suffragette.

"I did," answered the meek and lowly husband.

"And what did he say?" she queried.

"He said," replied the mere man, "that he wished his wife would make her two-hour speeches to the public instead of to him privately."

Cruel Inquiry.

"I'm suah," said Chollie Sefteligh with a drawing lisp, "that I don't know what I shall do when I get out of college. Mother wants me to be a minitrah, but I haven't leaned toward 'ithrachah." "Did you ever think of becoming an actress?" she asked cruelly.

Worth Weight in Gold.

A kingdom, Va.—Mrs. Jennie Mc Cardui, of this place, says, "I had been troubled with neural complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." Cardui is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1. bottles. — advertisement.

INCORRIGIBLE.

"Didn't I see you staring at that pretty girl we just passed?" asked Mrs. Boffels, severely.

"I can't say, my dear," answered Mr. Boffels, glibly. "To tell the truth, I looked at her so hard that I forgot to notice what you were doing."

NOT TO BE THOUGHT OF.

"A little exercise before breakfast gives one a hearty appetite."

"I couldn't risk it," said the commuter.

"Why not?"

"If I worked up an appetite for breakfast it would take time to eat it, and then I'd miss my train."

When Greek Meets Greek.

Two Greek women were haled to court for trying to dissect each other. The chief witness for the prosecution was a typical New Yorker, and in the choicest of New Yorkese he gave his testimony. "That there woman," he said, pointing to one of the women, "rushed across the street and hit this here woman," indicating the other one, "over the bean with a bushel measure. Then this here guy, carbolic," meaning the first woman, "grabbed a club and smashed this here gink over the nut with it." The lawyer for the defendants wanted to know the meaning of "a guy," "a gink," "a nut," and "a bean." After being put wise, he rebuked the witness because he had no sense of dignity. "Dignity," he snorted. "I've got dignity to burn, but I ain't familiar with these here Greek words, and I ain't going to throw no bluff for no lawyer." What's that lawyer expect anyway, when Greek meets Greek?—New York Times.

BASKETS FOR THE VERANDA

Hanging Blossoms or Clusters of Green May Be Employed to Beautify Front of House.

Have you ever tried to have hanging baskets of greenery and flowers on the veranda or in the summer living room? They are charming and they are not very difficult to keep in order. If the flowers do die they can be replenished with new ones, so that you can always keep a hanging bit of loveliness in sight.

First as to the choice of baskets. A porous sort is best, and perhaps the wire ones are best of all. Line the basket with moss.

As for the soil, a mixture of leaf mold and wood loam or rich garden loam is good. This soil must be enriched with fertilizer dissolved from time to time in the water with which it is moistened. The best way to water these baskets is to sink them in a tub of water and leave them there until they are wet through. If the vines and leaves hang in the water suspend them from a peg or bar above the tub.

Hang the basket where it will not be constantly subjected to wind, which dries out the soil, and don't let it have much sunlight—just enough to keep the soil sweet.

When the soil appears to have lost some of its richness place some manure in the water in which the basket is immersed several hours before the watering time. Or use a little bone meal—not too much—for a too-strong fertilizer might burn the roots and foliage. You will have to experiment a little about the amount and kind of enriching to do.

As for the plants to have, any kind of ivy ought to thrive in a basket and its lovely green makes it especially desirable. Dusty miller and wandering Jew are two reliable plants that will thrive under almost any conditions, and they make a charming background for flowering plants. Oxalis makes a pretty flowering plant to put in the basket, and ivy geranium is another. Any kind of geranium can be used, and fuchsias and strawberries are also satisfactory for the boxes. Ferns of various sorts can be used.

There is a new self-watering iron hanging basket, which needs watering only once a week and which does not drip, as it must be admitted the wire baskets do. Of course, this iron basket could be placed in a Japanese wicker basket if the iron did not harm the plants with its surroundings.

THREE VARIETIES OF BREAD

Each Has Its Distinct Value, and the Point is One For Individual Consideration.

It is well to know something of the differences of the three varieties of bread—white, wholemeal and brown—to aid the matter of choice in individual cases. White bread is made of the inside of the wheat; it is practically all starch, with a small amount of protein, much of that contained in the grain being removed in the outer shell. White bread is, therefore, less valuable for building up the body and system, but at the same time is the most digestible of the three varieties. Wholemeal bread, in contradistinction, contains the whole grain, after the husk has been removed; it is therefore richer in protein than the white variety, and where digestion need not be considered may be looked upon as the best kind for the ordinary diet of those in normal health.

Brown bread completes the list, and contains not only the whole grain, but also the husk of bran; this has no nutritive value, but is very good in providing a sufficiency of bulk, a point apt to be overlooked by those who consider food from the scientific standpoint, and also of real importance where growing boys and girls are concerned. The bran or husk present also sets up a healthful mechanical irritation of the bowels, and so is very useful in cases of chronic constipation, which are also helped by the bulkiness of the food.

Individual Shortcakes.

Put one cupful of flour, pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one heaping teaspoonful of shortening into bowl. Chop until all is well mixed. Add one scant half cupful of milk. Mix all together. Turn on to lightly floured board, press to inch in thickness, cut into large-sized biscuits, put on buttered pan and bake quickly in a very hot oven 12 minutes. When ready to serve break open, spread with butter and a little sugar, cover with berries that have been mashed and sweetened. Put on top of biscuit and dot with whipped cream. Or open biscuits, spread with butter, add mashed berries, then layer of whipped cream, then top of biscuit, berries and cream.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.

One pint of chopped cooked potatoes, one-fourth of a cupful of cream, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, three tablespoonfuls butter. Mix the first five ingredients; melt the butter in an omelet pan and when hot add the potatoes. Pack lightly into a layer of uniform thickness and cook slowly like an omelet. Fold and serve like omelet.

Chicken Soup.

Three pints chicken stock (use water you boil your chicken in), ten peppercorns, two slices carrot, one slice onion, one blade mace. Cook half hour. Add one pint milk, thicken with three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour. Salt and pepper to taste.
